

The new University of South Carolina Darla Moore School of Business by Rafael Viñoly Architects serves as a gateway to downtown Columbia's mixed-use Innovista district and an incubator for new economic development. Globally renowned for its international business program, the Moore School of Business—housed until now in a 1970s-era building near the university's historic campus—was in need of upgrading its facilities to reflect a leading twenty-first century business school. The new state-of-the-art facility, with a LEED Platinum rating, will be home to a community of over 5,000 students, faculty, and staff.
